A.J.C. Head Asks U.S. Aid Grants For Israel

Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee, urged the United States Government to take the lead in effecting an immediate rapprochment between the Arab States and Israel. He maintained that such a peace would establish the Near East as "a vital and strong outpost for the democratic nations."

At the same time the American-Jewish communal leader and industrialist of Baltimore appealed to the United States Government to extend grants-in-aid to the Israeli Government. Such economic assistance, Mr. Blaustein held, would help Israel solve its most pressing problems.

His address opened a two-day meeting in Chicago, Ill., of the national executive branch of the organization which, for the last forty-four years, has been devoted to the protection of the civil and religious rights of Jews in America and throughout the world. One hundred communal leaders, representing fifty major communities, were present.

Referring to what he described as the acute world situation, Mr. Blaustein asserted that "Israel is the best friend America has in the Near East."

He expressed the opinion that the Arab States would align themselves with the Western democratic bloc "if there is peace between them and Israel." For this reason, he added, the United Nations, particularly the United States and Great Britain, "must exert themselves to even a greater degree than heretofore toward that peace objective."

Pointing to Israel's serious economic position because of the reception of immigrants, Mr. [illegible] the contributions of American Jews to Israel as this may be the last chance for Jews behind the Iron Curtain to get out and come to Israel."

"Israel's people," he declared, want democracy and will oppose vigorously any form of totalitarianism from within and without. A considerable number of Israeli citizens had at one time or another lived under the rigors and oppressions of totalitarian government, and they want no more of that kind of set-up."

Mr. Blaustein held that a "Jew cannot live up to the tenets of his religion and be a Communist; they are incompatible."

At another session, Dr. John Slawson, executive director of the American Jewish Committee, declared that "in these perilous times it is important to keep in mind that the degree to which we practice democracy in our daily lives will contribute to our leadership in world affairs as a force for the ultimate victory of the liberal tradition over the barbarism of totalitarianism."

He pledged his organization's aid to cooperate with the United States Commission to the United Nations Economic and Social Council whose aim is "to contribute to the peace of the world by raising the level of education of all peoples."

The communal leaders, at another meeting under the chairmanship of Gustave M. Berne, the committee's treasurer, pledged their support to a "program of re-education of Jewish community effort to the continuing task of securing and extending American democracy."

Mr. Berne asserted that the nation again faced "a crisis which

Rabbi Received High Honor For Help To Christians

Rabbi Gabriel Schulman, sixty-six, of the Congregation B'rith Sholom, in New York, which has been housed in the Second Presbyterian Church, 6 West Ninety-sixth Street, died at the home of a friend. Rabbi Schulman had been twice honored in recent years for his work in fostering good will between persons of differing religious faiths. He received one of the 1949 Freedom House Awards and in 1948, received an award for distinguished service from the New York Presbytery.

In 1948, the Rev. L. Humphrey Walz, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, revealed that members of Rabbi Schulman's Jewish congregation had been helping to raise nearly $100,000 needed at that time by the Protestant church to save its fifty-six-year-old property. Dr. Schulman explained at the time that there had been evidence of co-operation between the Presbyterian Church and members of the Jewish faith in New York since Colonial times, and that Jews helped repair a church in Cedar Street, damaged by Hessian soldiers during the Revolutionary War. He recalled also that the Second Presbyterian Church had housed the Temple of Israel Congregation in 1922.

Rabbi Schulman was for almost twenty years the rabbi of the Park Avenue Synagogue, Park Avenue and Eightieth Street, but left that post in 1933. He was rabbi of the Temple Emanuel, in Yonkers, N.Y., for about ten years. Rabbi Schulman was born in Poland and came to the U. S. when he was nineteen years old.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sylvia Schulman; a son, Joseph Schulman; a daughter, Miss Gloria Schulman; and a sister, Mrs. Rose [illegible]

Charges Israeli Heads Weaken W. Z. O.

Leon Gellman, chairman of the World Mizrachi executive, who this week returned to New York from Israel, blamed "certain forces within the present Israel Government who are directly or indirectly seeking to weaken, and perhaps even to destroy, the authority, power, and influence of the World Zionist Movement. This policy, he said, has been developing ever since the establishment of the State of Israel. The World Mizrachi leader believed these attempts and the attempt to take all fund raising activities out of the hands of loyal and stalwart Zionists and transfer them to non-Zionists and even anti-Zionists, and the constant wooing by the government of these non-Zionists and anti-Zionists, are apparently part of a plan to achieve the complete disarmament of the World Zionist movement."

Such a policy, he added which would only tend to widen the breach between the State of Israel and Jews of the diaspora, seems to be of little concern to those responsible for this policy of alienating Zionists. Mr. Gellman, who served as president of the Mizrachi Organization of America for thirteen consecutive terms prior to his election to the chairmanship of the World Mizrachi movement, expressed the hope that the forthcoming plenary session of the Jewish Agency executive, will face these problems, and find some sort of working solution which through the Zionist movement will give the Jews of the diaspora more than a "passive spectatorial interest in the State" and which will find means of arousing the enthusiasm of world Jewry towards 'kibbutz galuyot' (ingathering of exiles) and more effective financial support of Israel.

The World Mizrachi leader in- [illegible] and reinvigorated World Zionist movement, whose American membership alone numbers more than 700,000, can guarantee the success of the United Jewish Appeal, the Israel bond issue, private investment drives, and other fund-raising endeavors for the benefit of Israel." He further added that "it is absolutely essential that the World Zionist movement become more deeply involved in the operation of Israel's enormous immigration program, since 'kibbutz galuyot' is the age-long concern and duty of world Jewry."

To make possible the regular monthly influx of 15,000 immigrants into Israel, a minimum of $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 are needed each year, he pointed out. Israel cannot and will not be able to meet this tremendous financial obligation alone, and it remains the fundamental responsibility of world Jewry, and particularly the World Zionist movement, to help meet this humanitarian need. Admitting that the present Israel government has imposed certain restrictions on the free exercise of private enterprise and individual capital investments, Mr. Gellman asserted that the "limping manner" which characterizes the present scope of United States Jewish businessmen's investments in Israel's economy is due more to their own apathy or lack of concern for Israel's needs than to the governmental restrictions. Enough leeway exists even within present limitations for U. S. businessmen to garner adequate profits, certainly enough to warrant a more intensive scale of capital investments than has taken place until now, Mr. Gellman stated. He said that Israel expects to absorb one million Jews within the next decade from the lands of their persecution and to achieve this Israel requires 1) peace with her neighbors and 2) billions of dollars, not just millions. Discussing the recent rationing regulations issued in Israel, he pointed out "that whatever criticism may have been leveled against the timing and method of the recent stringent rationing regulations, no one can doubt the necessity for such regulations as a means of assuring a fair distribution of food and clothing among the ever-expanding population of the country."

Turning to the role which the religious-Zionist movement is playing in the growth of the Jewish State, the World Mizrachi chairman said that despite the fact that Mizrachi has contributed to the building of the state for some fifty years, actually its real historic mission began the day the state was created, for, Mizrachi is the only movement in Israel today which daily labors for a positive and constructive approach toward

Says Waiting Lists Demand Huge Goal

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York opened a campaign for $20,000,000 with special ceremonies at Temple Emanu-El, Sixty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University, was the principal speaker.

The goal is the largest in the thirty-three-year history of the Federation. The fund will be used to maintain and to increase the services of its 116 affiliated hospitals and social service institutions. Twenty-five hundred persons pledged at the meeting to support the drive, termed a "campaign to wipe out waiting lists in the health and welfare field."

Stressing the Federation's services to 500,000 men, women and children last year, Ralph E. Samuel, the president, asserted that "we of the Federation and every New Yorker can be proud of what we have accomplished; we have met the needs of people equalling in numbers the population of a city as large as Dallas, Tex."

The Federation's head reported on the large waiting lists in areas in which affiliated agencies of the Federation serve. These include hospitals, family aid, child care and guidance, care of the aged, community centers, camping and vocational and employment services.

Mr. Samuel explained that the record goal was set in part because of rising operating costs of the institutions, attributable to the decreased value of the dollar, and the increased use of new knowledge in medical and social work, says the New York Times.

"We are publicly proclaiming that the problem of the waiting list is not insurmountable," he said. "We say that it should [illegible] and we shall recognize it — and begin to fight it — now. Proud as we are with what we have done and do, we choose to look facts in the face and say we have the courage to cope with them."

General Sessions Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, president of the federation's council of fraternal and benevolent organizations, defined the Federation as a mass movement in which 10,000 volunteer workers and almost 100,000 contributors each year demonstrated "their determination to help a half-million of their fellow men."

Three rabbis of the Orthodox, Conservative and Reform branches of Judaism conducted the religious services. The Rev. Dr. David de Sola of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Orthodox, gave a reading of the Scriptures; Dr. Israel H. Levinthal of the Brooklyn Jewish Center, Conservative, delivered the invocation; and Dr. Nathan A. Perilman of Temple Emanu-El, Reform, pronounced the benediction.

A plaque listing the names of 400 charter members of the Federation Building, those who had contributed $10,000 or more, was unveiled by Mrs. Felicia Warburg Sarnoff, granddaughter of the late Felix M. Warburg, banker and philanthropist, a founder and first president of the Federation.

Jews Leave Iran To Escape Poverty

Iran and Israel are working together in the closest cooperation on a program for the emigration of Jews from Iran that will have minimum disadvantages for Iranian commerce and finance and place the minimum strain on Israel. The representatives of both the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the Jewish community in Teheran repeat and insist that the Pahlevi dynasty and the present Premier, Gen. Ali Razmora, have been excellent friends to the Jews.

The policy adopted by the Government is that it has no desire to see Iranian subjects of the Jewish faith leave the country, but that if they wish to go they are at liberty to do so. They want the movement to be slow and orderly so that the liquidation of holdings in Iran will not overly disturb the economy.

The exception to this rule has been the Kurdish Jews from the frontier mountain areas in Kurdistan, who have been subject to persecution by their Kurdish neighbors since more than a year ago. The explanation generally given is that the Kurds of the northwest are Sunni Moslems and have been affected by the attitude of their co-religionists in the Arab

Court Sustains Law On Bible Reading In Schools

New Jersey's forty-seven-year-old law requiring the daily reading of at least five verses of the Old Testament in the public schools was sustained by the State Supreme Court. The act was attacked by Mrs. Anna E. Klein of Hawthorne, whose daughter, Gloria, attends the Hawthorne Public School, and Donald R. Doramus of Rutherford. They are affiliated with the United Secularists of America and brought the action as New Jersey tax-payers.

The suit also questioned the constitutionality of the recital of the Lord's Prayer, which frequently follows the Bible reading. This is not compulsory. The act permits any child, upon parents' request, to be absent from classes or assemblies during the Bible reading. The readings are presented without interpretation. The Supreme Court supported the Superior Court's finding that the readings did not tend to force students to hear sectarian teachings. The readings were seen as religious, but not sectarian, reports the New York Times.

In attacking the act, the appellants charged that "if religious teachings or sectarian instruction, no matter how lofty their purpose," were permitted, parents would be compelled to "expose their children to doctrines they consider con-

Woman Doctor Wins Award For Work In Birth Control Cause

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, a leader in the birth control movement since 1914, and Dr. Bessie L. Moses, Baltimore obstetrician, have been named winners of the Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation Awards in Planned Parenthood for 1950. Dr. Moses' citation, "in recognition of her brilliant record of forwarding the cause of planned parenthood among the public and the medical profession," said:

"Her twenty-three years of service in organizing contraceptive clinics, lecturing and teaching have raised the standards of clinic practice, spread knowledge and interest in conception control among physicians and nurses and made large segments of the public aware of the medical advantages of planned parenthood. The practice of medicine in office, clinic, hospital and public health are the better for her work and example."

Dr. Moses is instructor in obstetrics at Johns Hopkins University. She organized in 1927 the first birth control clinic in Baltimore, the Bureau for Contraceptive Advice, and since has been medical director of it and of the Planned Parenthood Association of Baltimore. She organized other clinics throughout Maryland, training white and Negro physicians for the work.

COURT SUSTAINS LAW

trary to their own conscience" or would be forced to pay for teaching elsewhere.

Expressing a contrary view, the Supreme Court said: "We consider that the old testament, because of its antiquity, its content and its wide acceptances, is not a sectarian book when read without comment.

"It is accepted by three great religions, the Jewish, the Roman Catholic and the Protestant, and at least in part by others. There are different versions, but the statute makes no distinction."

The Hawthorne Board of Education was named defendant in the action. It was represented at hearings by Alexander E. Pasoli of Hawthorne, who contended the First and Fourteenth amendments of the Federal Constitution, guaranteeing individual rights, including religious freedom, were not violated by the act. They drew the distinction, he said, between religious and sectarian teachings.

The appellants were represented by Heyman Zimel, of Paterson, N. J.

● CANADIAN JEWISH Congress is trying to place a number of skilled refugees, who are still in Europe, in employment in various communities here, and in co-operating in the project with the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society of Canada, the Joint Distribution Committee, and other groups. It has requested business people and community leaders across Canada to ascertain whether there are openings in their communities for workers in the following occupations: bookkeepers, chemists, confectioners, bakers, electricians, jewelers, mechanics, tailors, rabbis, furriers, tanners, milliners, butchers, dressmakers, photographers, woodworkers, textile workers, glaziers, printers. Arrangements have been made to reach such workers for whom there are sponsors in Canada and personal data on each of them is available. Prospective employers who wish to sponsor such immigrants should communicate with their local Congress committee or with the national headquarters of the Canadian Jewish Congress or of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society of Canada. The responsibility for the migration costs is being carried by the JDC or other institutions. Only the reception and housing of these immigrants will be the responsibility of the local community. This immigration project has become feasible as a result of the new order-in-council on immigration issued by the Canadian Government during the summer. The Congress estimates that several hundred Jewish immigrants should be able to secure entry into Canada under these arrangements.

A new nursery school, with two classes for children of two-and-a-half and three-and-a-half years of age, was set up in Jerusalem in connection with both the University's and the Government's Departments of Education. One of its purposes is to serve as a laboratory where modern educational study can be adopted to Israel conditions in actual practice. It is hoped that the School will eventually serve as a training centre for teachers. It is also hoped to develop educational equipment that may be made in Israel from materials available locally at low cost, and to write, illustrate, and test children's books. Much of the work is being done in conjunction with parents.

According to safety experts the most dangerous place of all is the home. More accidents happen there than any other single place. Guard against home accidents by keeping stairways free of toys and other obstacles and by seeing that all stairs and passageways are adequately and safely lighted.

The Revitalization Of The Talmud Torah For The School Of Tomorrow

BY GEORGE POMERANTZ, SUPERVISOR, EXTENSION ACTIVITIES, BOARD OF JEWISH EDUCATION, BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

In a recent issue of the Jewish Education magazine, Dr. Azriel Eisenberg states: "The core around which the program of the United Synagogue Commission on Jewish Education revolves is Hebrew. Not merely the mechanical reading of prayers, or even the knowledge of functional Hebrew, but the study of the Hebrew language and literature, a study which, we hope, will help rear a generation of literate Jews who will be able to read Hebrew, biblical and modern, with a reasonable degree of understanding, facility, and appreciation." Can we share his hope? Do the conditions of American Jewish education justify such a hope?

The Congregational School, with its three-day-a-week program and a curriculum centered about mechanical reading and functional Hebrew, is not capable of producing individuals who will carry on the great tradition of Jewish learning and who will be able to read classic and modern Hebrew. The Talmud Torah, too, has become a victim of the times.

A vivid description of the present day Talmud Torah is given by Mr. Judah Pilch: "The curriculum, while still consisting of the same subject matter, is, however, stripped of its Hebraic mantle. There is a little study of Humash translated into English, a little Hebrew given in English translation, and a great deal of mechanical reading of the Siddur, plus occasional discussion of Jewish history bearing primarily on the Bible stories. The classes are poorly graded, particularly the beginners' class, which is a receptacle for all types of students, of all ages, and of different backgrounds, who register at school whenever they wish. There is little, if any, school life because of the small number of children, extra-curricular activities, with the exception of a 'show' for the parents on Hanukah or Purim. The teachers are depressed and pessimistic. The elder Hebraists among them have become somewhat cynical; nor is the younger teacher very enthusiastic about the future of his work.

The percentage of pupils that continues in the Hebrew High School is so negligible that its graduates have little effect on American Jewish life. What, then, are the prospects for the future?

Fortunately there still are in America Jewish Parents who wish to give their children an intensive Jewish education, but are unwilling to send them to an all-day Jewish school. They believe in the Public School system and earnestly desire that their children come under its constructive influence. When such parents approach an educator asking him for help in choosing a proper afternoon school for their children, the conscientious educator is at a loss.

There are few schools to which he can refer them. There is hardly an afternoon school which graduates children having sufficient Hebrew knowledge to satisfy such parents. Shall we then concede defeat? Is American Jewry doomed to ignorance of its Hebraic heritage?

To avoid such a tragic eventuality we must differentiate the education of the majority from that of the minority. It is the opinion of the writer that the main reason for our failure in our schools is the lack of such differentiation. We have the same school and the same curriculum for those who enter school at the age of six and for those who enter at ten or eleven, for those likely to stay six years and for those who are certain to remain for only two or three years, for children with a Jewish experiential background and an aptitude for the Hebrew language and for those lacking these qualities.

About three decades ago, under the influence of Jewish educators and Zionists who immigrated to this country from Eastern Europe, a curriculum was developed for our Talmud Torahs patterned after the European. The speaking of Hebrew became one of the principal objectives. The makers of that curriculum did not realize that the American environment was different, that the average pupil would stay in Hebrew School for only two or three years, that the home was to become devoid of Jewish experiential background, and that neither the Synagogue nor the Community would make any appreciable demands for Jewish learning.

Obviously, such a program was destined to failure. The objective of speaking Hebrew was changed to reading Hebrew with understanding. New texts based on the translation method were introduced. The new materials had more Jewish content, the vocabulary was limited and graded in accordance with the findings of scientific studies but they lacked the esthetic values and interest appeal. The problem, however, remained unsolved. The school was unable to achieve even its revised objectives. The lack of interest on the part of the children hindered the learning process.

"A second difficulty that works against right use of reading is the lack of association between verbal subjects and life outside the school-room. Unless the reading is attached to actual sensory-motor and associational experiences at the time of teaching, we cannot expect these ties to be made spontaneously. The world of the child, particularly in the elementary school, is a sensory-motor world, he is interested in things that he can see, hear, touch, taste, plan, make, do, and try."

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

McGill University was matched with Harvard at Boston, Mass. During the warm-up period Harvard noticed to their amazement that McGill's team were kicking and carrying the ball. That was something new to Harvard in 1875, so the two captains got together.

They discovered they were playing different games. McGill had come to play rugger. Harvard was ready for soccer . . . but liked the Canadian game. The result was the United States' first "football" match—ending in a scoreless tie.

Close teamwork and sportsmanship have won many firsts for Canadians. And teamwork, with sportsmanship, helps you, too. Together they keep your opportunities for work and play in Canada . . . unlimited.

THE REVITALIZATION OF THE TALMUD TORAH

What do we find in the Hebrew School? The child enters the School full of enthusiasm, full of curiosity. It does not take very long, however before that enthusiasm begins to fade. There are many factors which contribute to this loss of interest. First among these is the textbook. In the first grade the child is given a colorful reader that teaches him to make meaningless sounds. Then when he finally learns half-way how to read he gets another book that teaches him to translate Hebrew words. To many a child such an exercise is very dull and boring. He is not learning an interesting story, nor is he acquiring information valuable to him.

After two years of "preparation" the pupils begin the study of Humash. Here the problem becomes more aggravated. With very few exceptions, the pupils are not ready for it. Not only have they failed to acquire an adequate vocabulary in the first two years, but the style of the Humash presents additional difficulties. The Humash lesson turns into a language lesson. And for language study on the elementary level, the Humash is a poor text.

Consequently, from here on the pupils have the feeling that they are at a standstill. The disciplinary problem becomes acute; the relationship between teacher and pupil becomes strained; and the great exodus begins. Under such circumstances it is no wonder that the attachment to school and love for things Jewish is almost in reverse proportion to the number of years the pupil stays in the school!

The root of the problem lies in the multiplicity of aims and objectives of our School which at many points contradict one another. Some of the children enter the School at the age of six or seven. These children can be expected to graduate and then continue their Hebrew education to reach the point of "reading adaptation." Because of this minority we teach all our children as if we were trying to prepare them all for the Hebrew High School.

We disregard the fact that at least eighty per cent of those who enter the school will never reach the graduating class. The majority of the children should therefore be given a special course geared to their needs. On the other hand, the young pupils who show promise, and interest should be given a very intensive course geared to their needs. They should not waste their time on mechanical reading when they can wait until this same reading material will become comprehensible to them. They should not begin the study of the Humash in the original in the third year when they are too young and linguistically unprepared for it, when they can wait another year or two until they are ready for it.

If these children could go on with their study of simple graded Hebrew, they should be prepared by the fifth year to learn Humash as such, including its spiritual and moral values, instead of spending their time as they do now, on learning how to read and translate Humash words.

Does it follow that they must study the Humash in its original Hebrew style in order to acquire its stories? Are there not any other ways to transmit these stories? And why must these children devote time to studying laws, customs, and ceremonies? These things are to be learned by doing, by experiencing. If they will stay in school long enough they will eventually learn the sources, the literary descriptions of the holidays from works which possess artistic power to impress the child.

"Teaching often substitutes bookish, unreal, abstract material for real-life situations. Learning that is acquired mechanically is almost forgotten, whereas rich experiences are almost always retained, as memorable events in themselves or in the form of intellectual deposits. If learning can become a rich experience, the problem of forgetting can be managed." In the Jewish School our teaching falls into this category. This is largely due to the error of trying to make the curriculum intensive and extensive at the same time.

We must make the Talmud Torah a truly intensive school. Aside from the Yeshivoth, we should have three distinct types of Schools: the Sunday School, the three-day-a-week School, and the Talmud Torah. (Perhaps we should change its name to Beth Hasefer.)

Each one should have a distinctly different curriculum. The Talmud Torah should have a 10-12 hour-a-week schedule (Saturday morning, too, can be utilized) and a seven-year curriculum. Children would have to be enrolled in the Talmud Torah at the age of six.

The main objective of the curriculum would be to develop in the children an appreciation of modern and classic Hebrew, and a desire and ability to read such Hebrew. All other objectives would be secondary. Although the purpose would be reading adaptation, the direct method is to be used.

Many experiments in educational psychology show that there is a quality and value in the spoken

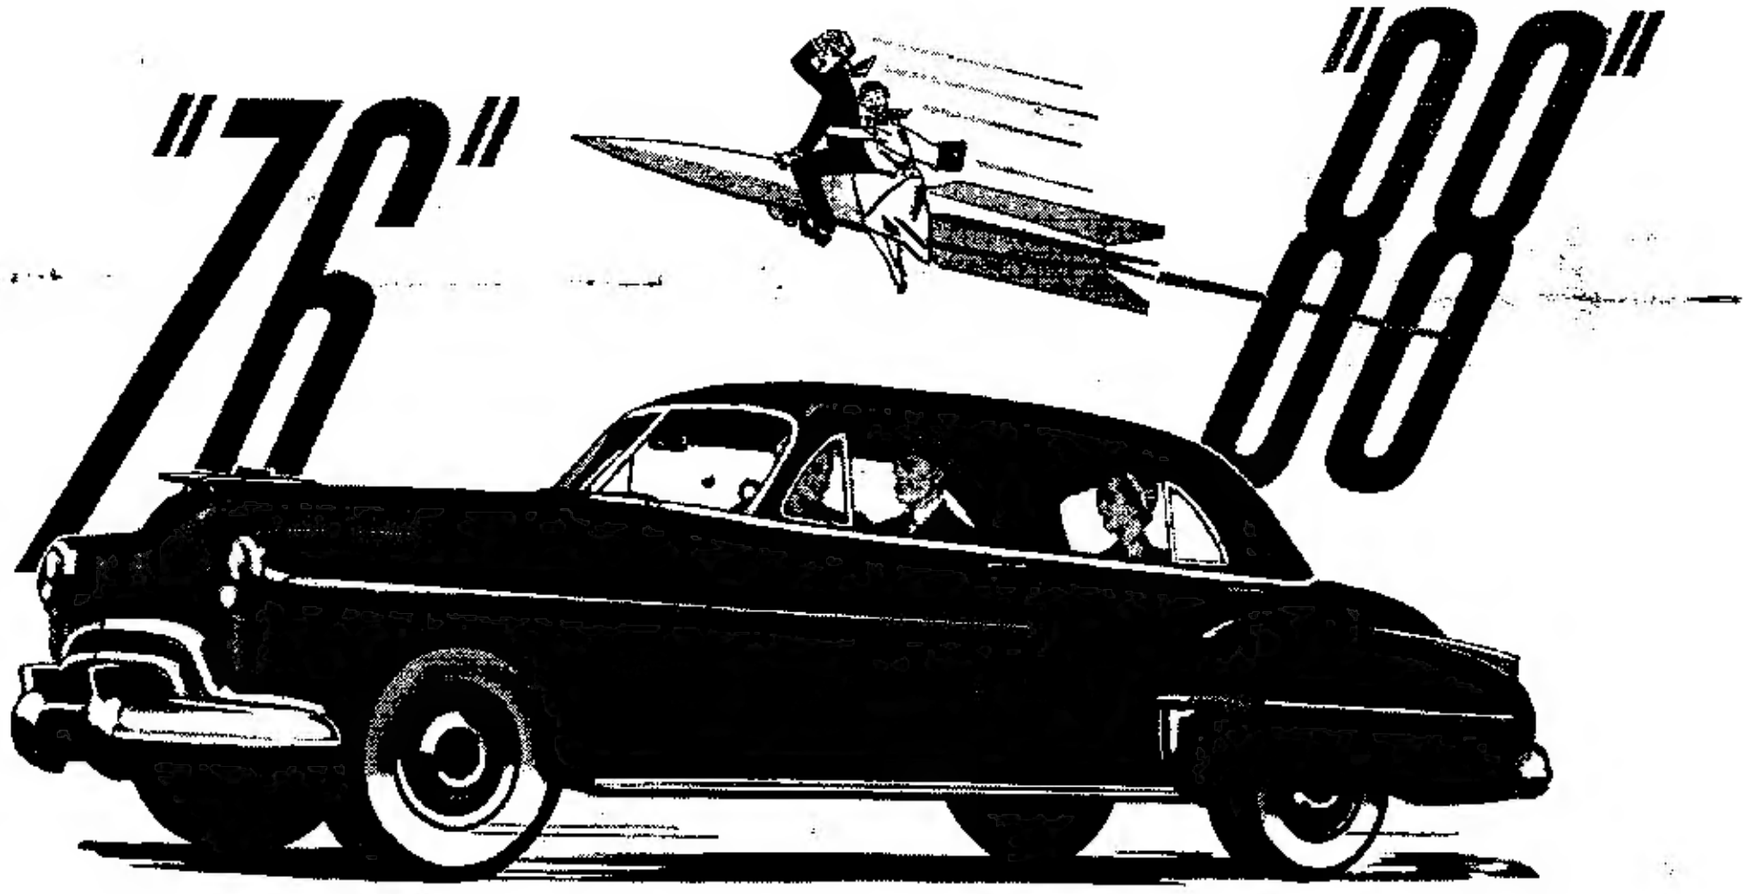
YOU'LL BE YEARS AHEAD WHEN YOU ROCKET AHEAD IN AN OLDSMOBILE

"76" "88"



JUST NATURALLY, the car that started first, is the car that's ahead right now in the march of motoring progress! Yes, Oldsmobile brings you the benefits of its extra experience in such revolutionary advancements as Hydra-Matic Drive*—the pioneer no-shift drive that's finest because it was first in the field, and has been proved and improved through actual billions of miles of driving in the past ten years!

The great new Oldsmobile "Rocket" Engine is another first from the continent's most experienced car maker. Pioneered two years ago, it has already started a major automotive trend toward valve-in-head engines of much higher compression—but the "Rocket" is by far the greatest because it's first, it's backed by many more years of research, development and perfecting!

And all through every model of the 1950 Oldsmobile "88" and the "76", powered by its improved "Big Six" Engine, there's example after example of Oldsmobile quality leadership . . . advantages that come to Oldsmobile owners because Oldsmobile, the car that was first in the field of all cars made on this continent today, has the good habit of keeping the lead!

So, go ahead—go years ahead—with an Oldsmobile!

*HYDRA-MATIC DRIVE . . . The truly automatic drive that outmodes the clutch pedal entirely! Proved by billions of miles of driving since Olds pioneered it more than 10 years ago. So simple, so relaxing . . . such a thrill! Standard equipment on Rocket-Powered Olds "88", optional at extra cost on "76" 6-cylinder models.

word which cannot be substituted by anything else. A committee which recently made an investigation of second language teaching recommended among others an increased emphasis on use of the spoken language "on the assumption that oral-aural proficiency is not only a valued aim in itself but that it can also facilitate the acquisition of an appreciative and durable reading knowledge."

This does not mean that Hebrew is to be used to the exclusion of English. We live in America and the Hebrew School must always take this fact into account. The direct method is to be used because it is a more efficient method in the teaching of language.

All reading materials, even those of the first year, will have to be comprehensive. "Mechanical" reading is a waste of time. Repetition is a great factor in memorizing only when it is contrived so that the child faces a new experience with each repetition. Drill, too, must be meaningful; the child has to see need for it and be interested in it. The learning of the language should precede the teaching of reading. The children should acquire a vocabulary in the first year through the oral-aural method.

"Very young children learn new words better when they are presented to the ear than when presented to the eye, for the reason that their early word experience is auditory and not visual." After the children wil have acquired knowledge of basic vocabulary, we would be able to present to them hundreds of pages of new text in one semester. The children would then learn to read stories and poems instead of learning to translate words.

The modern intensive Talmud Torah would be child-centered. The curriculum would be planned so as to give the child not only a knowledge of subject matter but a great deal of rich experiences. All learning would be motivated. Teaching succeeds to the degree that it leads the child to be an active, willing participant in an educational activity, since a child learns chiefly through his own reaction to a situation or experience.

These activities must be vital to the child and appeal to him as being worthwhile. They must be directed toward the achievement of goals that are meaningful to him at his stage of growth and development. We must therefore create in the school real situations where the child will experience a need for Hebrew and find a satisfaction in using it.

Preparing programs for assemblies, Sabbath service with recitation of poems and songs, with Kiddush and Zemirot, creating a play based on some Bible story might be some of the projects. The school would have a Hebrew library and Hebrew newspaper. Correspondence between the children of the Talmud Torah and children in Israel would be of great value. To make the contact more concrete a movie might be taken of the daily life of the children they correspond with.

Arts and crafts would be a vital part of the curriculum. Creative dramatics, music, drawing are much more powerful and much more impressive than verbal symbols and words in a textbook. An experience of an artistic nature leaves an imprint on the personality of the child. A reaction to such an experience causes a new behavior pattern and thus results in real learning.

Let it be clear, it is not suggested that the Talmud Torah be transformed into a school for the Hebrew language. The subject matter of the traditional curriculum is to be retained but more modern methods must be introduced and wastes eliminated. Thus, in the intensive Talmud Torah, the children will of course learn to pray. However, they will use those prayers which fit their stage of language development. When necessary they will also make up their own Hebrew prayers.

Similarly they will study Bible, but in the early years the stories and the laws of the Bible will be taught to them in a style and vocabulary fitting the level of their Hebrew knowledge. The Bible in the original will be left for the last three years when the children will be mentally and linguistically ready for it. At present most of the Hebrew Schools introduce the original Bible in the third year. Experience has shown that beginning with the third year in Hebrew School children reach a plateau in the learning of Hebrew and retroactive inhibition takes place. This is a fact well known in educational psychology.

Audio-visual aids will be used not for entertainment purposes but as teaching aids. Many recordings and film strips have already been prepared by Bureaus of Jewish Education. In the future we may expect some central agency to prepare children's recorded Hebrew radio plays, film strips, depicting the highlights of the life of our heroes and Hebrew films with a plot suited for children. The modern Talmud Torah will make use of such materials. Of course, none of these materials should or could replace the good text book or the good teacher. These materials will be used by the teacher as aids in creating background and arousing child curiosity to learn more about the characters involved. These materials will form part of the curriculum, and will complement the unit.

Thus the children will not learn a story about the wise men of Helm in Hebrew, then turn to the Humash and learn "Mishpotim" and then go to the assembly to see the film "A State Is Born." In the intensive school the lessons will be so planned that the film will be closely related to the subjects they are studying and supplemented by them. There will be no extracurricular activities because all activities will form part of the curriculum.

The formal and informal learning will be completely blended. The school will aim to give the child as many direct purposeful experiences as possible. In such a school there will be an atmosphere of learning, an atmosphere conducive to creativity by teacher and pupil. The cultural heritage of our people will form the main subject of the curriculum, and education for living in America as cultured Jews, its main objective.

The writer realizes the difficulties that are involved in such a program. The first is to get teachers who can use the activity method efficiently and teach formal subject matter in an informal way. Many of the projects will have to be created by the teachers themselves. In the school herein envisaged the teacher will not be able to rely on the text book. Some of the printed matter may be available only in one copy and could therefore be introduced to the children only through an opaque projector. Much of the audiovisual material would have to be made by the teacher and some also by the children. The teachers would have to cooperate with one another. For many a project it would be necessary to combine two or three classes and work with them as one unit. At times a large group would practice with one teacher while some small group or even individuals would work with some other teachers.

A second problem is transportation. There will probably not be enough children in any one neighborhood to fill such a school. Furthermore, such a school will be very expensive and will demand extraordinary effort on the part of both parents and children. These very facts, however, should help the school attract those children whose parents are vitally interested in intensive Jewish education and are prepared to make the necessary sacrifices.

Public relations, too, will be involved, to a certain degree. Many children will have to be refused admittance, and others, after failing to show an aptitude for Hebrew wil have to be advised to transfer to a less intensive school. The fact that the Talmud Torah will have to solicit children from neighborhoods where there are other Hebrew Schools may also form quite a problem. No school seems to be willing to let children of its own neighborhood attend another school.

However, if we sincerely wish to establish a school that will advance Jewish life in America along new creative paths, we can overcome all these difficulties. Jewish education is being more and more centralized. A central agency can guide the parents and direct the children to their proper schools. A central agency should provide schools for the few as well as for the many. A central agency should look out for tomorrow as well as for today. The school of tomorrow will never come to be, unless we do something about it today.

This article is from Jewish Education.

Baruch Stresses Duty To Care For "Our People"

The basic essentials of food, shelter and good health "belong to all the people by right and not by sufferance," Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, wife of the New York Senator, declared as guest of honor, at a luncheon meeting at the Plaza Hotel, opening the campaign by the women's division of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York to raise $2,500,000 toward its $20,000,000 goal.

Sharing the platform with Mrs. Lehman was Bernard M. Baruch, who told how he learned his first lesson in the meaning of Jewish philanthropy at his father's knee seventy-five years ago.

Recalling that a peddler with a pack on his back came to the little town of Camden, S. C., Mr. Baruch said his father, Dr. Simon Baruch, sheltered the man in his home overnight. Before leaving the next morning, Mr. Baruch said, the peddler remarked about the kinship of "unsere Leute," (German for "our people,") while pointing to the doctor's name on his physician's shield.

It was then, Mr. Baruch said, "my father explained to me the great Jewish wanderings, the wanderings of these people, their great sufferings, and our duties to see that 'unsere Leute' should be cared for." Before caring for "our people," however, Mr. Baruch said, his father emphasized that "my first allegiance was to the stars and the flag that represent our Constitution and the institutions formed under it. Freedom and democracy have meaning only if all individuals are guaranteed the minimum essentials of life to which they are entitled," Mrs. Lehman said. "For this reason the Federation is now ready to face the fact our city still has enormous unmet needs which must be faced if our community is to live in security."

Mrs. Lehman said that "the world cannot be happy and at peace with segments of its population prosperous and content while others are in dire need, both physically and spiritually."

In introducing Mrs. Lehman Ralph E. Samuel, federation president, referred to her husband as "outstanding, one of the models for American business men, Jew and gentile to follow."

Use disposable handkerchiefs when coughing, sneezing, or expectorating. This will do much to halt the spread of infection, because numerous diseases are spread from the mouth and nose.

Recruit Social Workers For Israel

Ellis Radinsky, executive director of the United Palestine Appeal, chief beneficiary of the U. J. A., announced that a joint project has been started to select 100 American trained and experienced social service personnel for immediate employment in Israel. Mr. Radinsky, who heads the newly formed National Committee to Select Social Workers for Israel, said that the social workers would help direct the rehabilitation and resettlement program for new immigrants entering the country.

The formation of the committee, he added, followed an urgent appeal from the Israel Ministry of Welfare and service agencies "to meet the drastic need for trained personnel who can serve as a working nucleus in helping to orientate and resettle thousands of immigrants in Israel every month."

The first American social worker, Miss Hilda Meyerowitz of New York, sailed aboard the S. S. La Guardia for Israel where she will supervise guidance and counseling activities among orphaned immigrant children. Miss Meyerowitz, a native of Germany who came to the U. S. in 1935, is a graduate of the School of Social Work of Berlin and of the New York and Pennsylvania Schools of Social Work.

American social workers will be required to contract for a minimum of fifteen months' service including three months' orientation. Round trip transportation will be provided for approved applicants who complete the fifteen months' service, Mr. Radinsky said.

The U.S. Public Health Service says that of all the factors of man's environment none is more important to his welfare than food. Of all food, none is more important than milk.

CLASS IN COOKERY

STEWED PRUNES

one tablespoon sugar (if desired) few slices of orange or lemon
one cup corn syrup
two pounds prunes

Wash prunes in luke-warm water, cover with water; add sliced fruit. Boil for a few minutes, put in the corn syrup and allow to boil until juice thickens. Add sugar if desired.

CHOCOLATE SPONGE CAKE

six eggs
one cup granulated sugar
one cup cake flour
one teaspoon baking powder
one teaspoon lemon juice
one-half teaspoon grated lemon rind
one teaspoon vanilla
one pinch salt

Preheat oven and have ready ten-inch square cake tin, lined with parchment paper. Beat whites of eggs; pour in one-third cup sugar, then stir. Repeat this process three times, so that sugar is used up. Add yolks, lemon juice, finely ground lemon rind, vanilla, salt, and beat a few strokes; sift together flour and baking powder, then beat into mixture until the flour is not visible, and the mixture becomes creamy. Hold mixture high above prepared pan and pour in, then shake pan with mixture a few times to get bubbles of air out. Place in moderate oven, 375 degrees, and bake from fifteen to twenty minutes.

Chocolate Icing

one cup icing sugar
one tablespoon cocoa one-and-a-half to two tablespoons cream
one pat butter

Stir mixture until smooth. Remove cake from oven, cut in half, and make double layer, placing icing in between layers, and on top. Spread coloured coconut on icing and allow to set.

Deplores Empty Hebrew U And Hospital

Henry Morgenthau Jr. traveled in a sealed ambulance across Arab territory to Mount Scopus to visit the empty buildings of Hebrew University and the Hadassah Hospital. The former United States Secretary of the Treasury became chairman of the school's board of governors.

Mr. Morgenthau received special permission for the journey from the Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission since no regular convoy across the Arab-held section of the road to Mount Scopus was scheduled. Upon his return to Jewish Jerusalem, Mr. Morgenthau said: "It is inhuman waste to have the Hebrew University and Hadassah Hospital stand empty and useless when both Jews and Arabs are in desperate need of those institutions.

"Mount Scopus is a symbol of culture and learning which Jewish people are ready to place in service of all humanity. Its laboratories, medical school, and particularly its outstanding cancer research equipment cannot and dare not remain idle. These institutions are vital instruments for peace and mutual cooperation among all peoples and everything possible must be done to return them to service of mankind."

Pneumonia is a communicable disease. Only those responsible for the care of a pneumonia patient should enter the sickroom.

Groups Denounce Hate-Monger

Six Jewish organizations condemned Merwin K. Hart and the National Economic Council for financing "his many-sided program of hate-mongering with the funds contributed by people who are under the impression that they are combating Communism."

The National Community Relations Advisory Council said that Mr. Hart had been denounced by it and the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, the Jewish Labor Committee and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The denunciation came after the appearance in recent weeks of paid advertisements in "several responsible daily newspapers."

"The recent exposure of Hart and his National Economic Council before Congressional investigating committees and in the public press," the groups said, "has resulted in the withdrawal of support to his organizations by many leading citizens and organizations. Hart now seeks to recoup those losses by advertisements."

W.J.C. LEADER GOES TO ASIA AND ISRAEL

Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, representative of the World Jewish Congress at the United Nations, left New York for London en route to Australia, New Zealand, Indonesia, Singapore, India, and Israel. He will address meetings and conferences, both Jewish and general, in all these countries, and will also report to the leaders of the Jewish communities which are affiliated to the World Jewish Congress, on the work of the Congress. He will also confer with government leaders in these countries on human rights and on international problems arising out of the present world situation. In Australia, which Dr. Perlzweig is visiting under the auspices of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, he will address a national conference in Melbourne, to which representatives of all the Jewish communities of the Commonwealth have been summoned. He will also deliver addresses to the Australian Institute of International Affairs and the United Nations Association.

My Pilgrimage To Israel

"They go from strength to strength,
Everyone of them appeareth before God in Zion." - Psalm 84:8

The impulse to pilgrimate to Jerusalem has ever been strong within the heart of the Jew. In ancient times our forefathers would come from the various parts of Palestine to the holy city of Jerusalem during the three pilgrim festivals. The impulse to visit a holy place and thus find exaltation seems to be universal. There is no doubt that in Christianity and in Mohammedanism the tradition of visiting holy places has been derived from Judaism, the mother faith.

When, on August 29, in the year 70 of the common era, the Jewish State was destroyed by the Romans, and Jews became wanderers on the face of the earth, they faced at all times eastward toward Jerusalem in their daily prayers and despite all difficulties sought on occasions to come to the holy city. The mystics and the poets and the rabbis of Israel have ever longed to behold Jerusalem.

This summer I was privileged to come to Jerusalem on a fourth pilgrimage. We landed from the London Airport by plane at Lydda, after a ten-hour flight. We then travelled by limousine from Lydda to Jerusalem. This night ride by moonlight will ever live in our memory. We hardly realized that at last we were in the State Of Israel and on our way to the most historic city in all the world. Two o'clock in the morning, we reached the King David Hotel in this city of cities. We would hardly retire, though we were weary, for we felt the thirty centuries of Jerusalem Jewish history converging upon us. Jerusalem is indeed a city of character and those who reside in this city realize the preciousness, the history, and the spirituality of the place.

It was an exciting experience to walk the streets of New Jerusalem, the city bought at such a costly price, during the war of liberation. At least thirty types of Jews now reside in this holy place. East Indian Jews look like East Indians and Yemenite Jews like Arabs and American Jews like Americans. How can one speak of a specific Jewish type? In the present Israeli population, all these types have now to be fused into a nation, whose culture will reflect the best in all groups represented in the land.

It is a thrilling experience to behold the New Israel, so rich in impressive achievements since the establishment of the State only a little over two years ago. Here a war was fought and won. Here a new army, navy and air force were patiently created. Here is a little land which has succeeded in the past two years in bringing in four hundred and thirty thousand immigrants. Here is a place where people have learned the art of sharing, sharing food, pleasures, clothing. Here is a land where more building activity is to be observed than in any other country in the world.

Everybody seems to be doing something. Labourers are clearing the land, removing stones. Men and women are working in the fields. Employees are streaming out of factories. Women in large numbers are to be found in the professions. They are doctors, pharmacists, taxi cab drivers, workers in the field and soldiers in the army. One is struck by the hundreds of little houses that are now studding the land, these being homes for the newcomers, for the refugees. These refugees after being registered and examined physically and mentally are placed in camps, colonies or schools. If a person does not work, that person has no bread to eat.

How inspiring it was to climb the highest hill of Jerusalem, where rest finally the earthly remains of the great and immortal Dr. Theodor Herzl. Here we sat by the grave of this immortal for a long, long time meditating upon the power of one individual when he is possessed of prophetic insight. Here we recalled how this man was scoffed at and ridiculed by the rich Jews, who turned a deaf ear when he appealed for the redemption of the ancestral home and the building therein a new Jewish life, for the glory of God, for Israel and for mankind. Here we thought of the fact that this man died of a broken heart because his generation for the most part failed to see what was his vision. But Herzl, the dreamer, was right and the Jewish rich were wrong.

Israel, the Jewish State lives miraculously again because one man dared to dream a dream. How touching it is that in his last will and testament, Herzl requested that when the Jewish State came into being, his remains and that of his parents should be moved to the Holy Land. A year ago last August, the memorable day came when Herzl's coffin was deposited in the hallowed soil of Israel Reborn. What a sacred shrine the resting place of Theodor Herzl has become for all Israel.

Of course, present-day Israel has rough spots! What can we expect from an infant State? Surely, we must be patient and refuse to be critical. One thing sure, so remarkable are the achievements already made in the land that only the word "miracle" can explain it all and I would urge Jews from Canada and the United States to go and behold this greatest miracle of our times, Israel Reborn. An important member of the government said: "Why are so few Canadians coming out, either as tourists or settlers?" Of course, I had to confess that many Canadian and American Jews seem to find it more comfortable to sojourn in Miami, Florida, rather than in Jerusalem, Israel. And yet, I would urge my fellow-Jews on this side to go at the very earliest on a pilgrimage to Israel and derive the great joy of beholding this blooming period of the Jewish State. For soon this State will settle and take on for the most part the form of other States and Republics, established long ago.

One of the agitating questions facing the Israeli population is that of economic balance. Surely, American and Canadian businessmen can help Israel by making private investments in Israel enterprises. The number of investors in Israeli industry from America and Canada, has not been what it ought to be. Indeed, too, there seems to be a let-down in the support of the United Israeli Appeals for funds. Our generation, which has been privileged to behold this Messianic unfoldment of Israel Reborn, must meet the challenge of history and stand by in support of the State of Israel in all its ramifications.

ORT Trainees Show Developed Skills

Mrs. Dorothea Greene, director of ORT (Organization for Rehabilitation through Training) in Germany and Austria, said in New York that there are between 700 and 1,000 refugees infiltrating the barriers of the Iron Curtain countries into Germany every month, many of whom are Jewish. She reports that the barbed wire barriers and powerful patrols at all borders render escape extremely difficult. Yet, despite this, the infiltration continues. Mrs. Greene served as Activities Officer with the Balkan Mission in the Middle East Office of UNRRA, where she was responsible for employment and vocational training work. She was also Vocational Training Officer of the DP operations and then Field Inspector of UNRRA's Central Headquarters in Germany. Discussing the vocational training program sponsored by ORT, Mrs. Greene said that, in addition to Israel which is in great need of qualified workers, according to the new DP Act in the United States and the regulations of all immigration countries, no selector will grant a visa to anyone without a trade or work certificate. Certification of skill is determined by a trade testing team in which two ORT instructors participate.

Turning to the general problem of Jewish DP's in Germany and Austria today, Mrs. Greene expressed that there is a sizable number of older DP's who do feel able to migrate and reestablish themselves once more in new countries. In addition, there are thousands of "hard core" or rehabilitation cases whom no country will accept. These and the new infiltrees from Eastern Europe and the Russian Zone, who have no legal status and are not granted visas, will leave about 35,000 Jewish DP's in Germany after emigration is completed. "When IRO operations cease, the residual group of DP's of all nationalities will be turned over to German Government supervision. This creates the terrible anomaly of returning the victims to their former persecutors and, of course, places a heavier burden on voluntary agencies," said Mrs. Greene. She then stressed the need for continued international supervision and protection of the DP's.

The ORT school in Munich has been functioning in a rather unique way according to Mrs. Greene. Because of a severely limited budget and the difficulty of obtaining material for students to work with, this institution with 400 students has been producing fur coats for one of the best German fur firms in return for receiving the materials for the coats, additional practice material and the payment of one instructor. Two of the students in this course recently came to the United States and settled in Louisiana, where they had jobs waiting for them. They are both earning $85 a week as skilled furriers.

The dental technicians course worked out another very practical and useful procedure. Many DP's are held up from immigration simply because their teeth are bad. An arrangement was accordingly made with the IRO and other agencies who send DP'S, in need of false teeth, to the Munich School. The agencies involved supply the material and the ORT students make a perfect set to fit the individual for about $6. German dentists charge between $50 and $60. 300 sets have been made in the past two years.

The students at this school are also becoming expert mechanics. By arrangement with two German firms, which supply the equipment, ORT students repair all types of engines, including diesel. Their 14 months to two years of study equip them with a well-rounded skill including ability to use most of the modern machinery used in industrial plants. During the past year 4,721 people received training in all courses at five schools and four rehabilitation centers in Germany.

"Our work among the rehabilitation cases has been nothing short of a miracle," said Mrs. Greene. She spoke about people who had been in hospital beds since their liberation from the dread concentration camps. "These people were understandably unwilling at first to become interested in anything, do anything or ever to try to live. Over a long period and with much patience we were able to bring them back to life. We had a great victory one day. After months of taciturn refusal to look up when our instructor came into the room, five old ladies started to peek through half-closed eyes at the bright wool which had been sent by Women's American ORT. From their original disinterest in any activity whatsoever, they broke hospital rules by hiding the wool under the bed clothes and resuming their knitting when they should have been sleeping. The work we have done and continue to do with these people has been literally a saving of their souls for they have once more found themselves and the desire to live."

In the rehabilitation camp at Gauting and the Children's Village at Bad Aibling, the majority of the students are non-Jewish. IRO funds help support these ORT projects.

Mrs. Greene, who is of Protestant denomination, was placed in the National Fund's Golden Book on the occasion of Chaim Weizmann's 75th birthday, for her outstanding services to the Jewish people. Her citation is for work on behalf of displaced persons from Women's American ORT, an affiliate of the American ORT Federation, major contributor to the overseas vocational training installations maintained by World ORT Union. The American ORT Federation currently receives funds through a special agreement with the Joint Distribution Committee, a member agency of the United Jewish Appeal.

JEWS LEAVE IRAN

countries following the Palestine conflict.

The latest figures indicate that six thousand of these Kurdish Jews have come down to Teheran and have found refuge either in the big camp in one of the two Jewish cemeteries or in the synagogue garden. An estimated 6,000 to 8,000 are possibly still in Kurdistan.

In the villages away from the frontier there has been little and sometimes no persecution. These are Jews from the earliest days of the dispersal who have lived for more than 2,000 years in the mountains of Kurdistan and adopted the way of life of the tribesmen there. Between 1,500 and 2,000 have been transported by plane to Israel and about 2,000 are in the camp, according to estimates.

The movement of Iraqi refugees to Israel from Teheran has been much faster. The second of the large camps in the two cemeteries is a transit camp and all Iraqis are now housed in that camp except for a few who have quarters in the town. About 8,000 according to the estimate, have gone to Israel during the year. Another 1,000 to 1,500 are at present in the camp waiting to be transported to Israel. The number leaving monthly at this time is around 300 to 400. They had been moving to Israel at the rate of about 800 monthly.

Iranian Jews are moving at the rate of about 300 monthly. Nearly all of them are of the very poor class, and leaders of the Iranian Jewish community say that in general they are seeking to escape poverty, says the New York Times. They emphasize that those who want to go are not fleeing any legal discrimination or persecution but a poverty that is almost universal. There are 100,000 to 110,000 Iranian Jews, of whom perhaps 1,500 have gotten to Israel since the end of the Palestine conflict.

The Iranian Jews, according to the spokesmen of the Jewish community and the Jewish Agency, are the descendants of the first Jews exiled to Babylon. They moved into Persia principally during the prosperity of the first Persian Empire and, according to the traditions of the community, enjoyed full equality and prosperity until the Islamic conquest. Since that time, the majority have sunk into poverty and distress.

demands unity and teamwork among all peoples in America to secure our democracy from attacks by its enemies from within and without." He called for the internal strengthening of the Jewish community in America.

Dr. Moses noted that seven southern states were the only ones in the nation that had incorporated child-spacing guidance into their public health services. They are North Carolina, which took the step in 1937; South Carolina, Virginia, Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi.

"Everybody is searching," Dr. Moses said, "for a cheap and simple method acceptable to untutored and undisciplined populations."

They are the first women to receive the awards since they were established in 1943. The Planned Parenthood Federation of America, 501 Madison Avenue, New York, announced that, "in view of Mrs. Sanger's long, untiring service in a cause which has become synonymous with her name," the usual $500 cash award had been doubled in her case by the Lasker Foundation.

Dr. D. F. Milam, director of the federation, said that Mrs. Sanger never had consented previously to being considered for the award. Her award citation reads: "To Margaret Sanger, foremost in teaching families wise planning in birth control: Leader in influencing nations toward balanced population; living to see her beginnings in city slums grow into plans for a planet."
